

Orland Men Plan Amusement Project To Cost $20,000

A number of Orland Park men and a number of outsiders are visualizing the possibilities that the natural beauties on the very edge of the village hold for the future, if they are properly promoted. Another factor these men are not overlooking is that next year being the great Chicago World's Fair year, it is all the more reason why the natural beauties mentioned should be cashed in. With not only this factor in mind, but also with the idea that the project in mind will be an asset to Orland Park, these men are planning to organize a syndicate with a capital of $20,000 or more with which to erect a modern dance pavilion in the vicinity of the lake at the north edge of the village. The erection of a number of cabins along the shores of the lake are also contemplated. The dance pavilion is understood would be a very modern one and so built that it could be used for dances all the year around. The contemplated building would be 50x90 feet.

The proposed project lies within the zoning district of Orland Park and this particular section is zoned for residences only.

Blue prints of the project have been prepared and were submitted to the village board at their meeting Monday night and the board was asked to rezoned four blocks from residential to business sections from 139th to 140 or 141st street. The board gave no decision and will take the matter under consideration. It is understood that if the zoning proposition is settled and the stock in the project sold, work on the project would be begun this fall.

PALOS FLOWER SHOW ARTISTIC TRIUMPH

The 28th annual Palos Park Flower Show was held in the community church Thursday, Sept. 8th was under the auspices of the Palos Woman's Club for the first time the club is affiliated with the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs district and state organizations.

In any community a Flower Show is a lovely thing, but in Palos the annual show is an Institution. People who never leave their yards will come and bring the wealth of their fine gardens. Therefore, the Flower Show was a success, socially and artistically. Mrs. Wm. Baitwood, the garden chairman, had charge of the affair, with Mrs. Donald Richberg assisting. A cafeteria supper was served at 6 p. m. with Mrs. George Ward supervising.

Those receiving blue ribbons were as follows: Mesdames Ward, Lord, Avery, Richberg, Hellig, Stockdale, Hammit, Schultz, Baltwood, Christie, Hyink, Schmidt, DeGroth, Darby, Doak, and the Rowles, Myric, Clara Clara Mah, The Southmoor and Oak Hills country clubs.

Red ribbons were given to many as were white also. The exhibit arranged by some of the Junior members received recognition.

Those acting as judges were: Mrs. Wallace Butler Combs, the State Federation Garden Chairman, Mr. W. DeNova and Mrs. William Hawk, state Indian Welfare Chairman for the Federation.

Previous to the opening of the Flower Show Mrs. Patterson entertained the district president, Mrs. Fred Waterman, and the women judges at luncheon.

Lemont was declared the champion ball team of the Southwest Suburban Baseball League last Sunday, when they played the final game of the season with Midlothian at the Tinley Park diamond. The Lemonters walloped the Midlothianites to a fare you well, carrying off victory with a score of 14 to 2. A week ago Midlothian beat Orland at Tinley by a score of 9 to 2.

The victory Sunday places Lemont as champion of the eight teams comprising the league.

A very large crowd attended the game last Sunday.

Mokena Fishermen Back Up Fish Story With Big Muskie

Wm. Lynk and Herman Schweser both of Mokena who are vacationing at Eagle River, Wisconsin, seem to know all the fish by their first name and caught a big muskungee 42 inches in length, weighing 21 pounds. Matteson Contender For Midwest Baseball League Pennant

Matteson defeated Manhattan in the first game of the Mid-West pennant series last Sunday by a score of 10 to 4. Schultz, Matteson pitcher was in good form and held Manhattan hitters easily in its pinches, allowing but 6 hits. A home run by Koerner and a pair of two baggers by Delaney accounted for the runs scored by Manhattan.

The second game of the pennant will be played at Manhattan next Sunday. A victory for Matteson will clinch the pennant and eliminate the necessity of playing the third game. Should Manhattan win an effort will be made to have the deciding game played at Homewood. If the third game is necessary it will be played September 25th.

Mokena Man Has a Curious Plant known as Sensitive Plant

A. E. Wachter of Mokena has a curious and interesting plant which he recently brought from Grand Rapids, Michigan. The plant is called a "sensitive" plant because it droops its leaves when they are touched by a person. The leaves resemble those of a fern. When the leaves are touched in the day time they at once close up. At night all the leaves close up.

appeared at his farm and sought to claim the farm on a tax title. He claimed taxes had not been paid on the farm for years and he secured a tax title. The farmer got out all his tax receipts, but upon investigation it was found the wrong description was given and instead of paying the taxes on his farm he was paying taxes on a piece of property in Roseland.

This edition of the News-Bulletin is dedicated to the 70th anniversary celebration of St. John's Evan. church and congratulations are extended, also wishes for enduring service to the community in years to come.

OPENING MEETING OF ORLAND PARK P. T. A. VERY SUCCESSFUL

The opening meeting of the new school year found the officers and members of the Orland Park P. T. A. very much "on the job and raring to go." When president Arnold sounded the gavel to call the meeting to order, last Thursday night, a fair representation of the membership was present.

In opening the meeting, a pleasing innovation was introduced by the new President, that of the pledge of allegiance or salute to the flag by the entire membership. This was followed by a song, again by the entire audience, dedicated to and extolling in verse and music the beauties, advantages, etc., of Orland Park.

The business part of the session was routine outside of the report of the auditing committee on last year's books and was disposed of with dispatch. It was also decided to substitute a dollar in cash as the prize. President Arnold introduced the new members of the faculty, Mr. Donisage, principal and high school instructor; Miss Masters, high school instructor; Mr. Barany 6th, 7th and 8th grade instructor. Each responded with a short acknowledgment and voiced their pleasure at their new association and expressed their hope for a successful year.

Miss Schmaedeke and Miss Kettering, holdover members of the faculty were both present and were also introduced.

An interesting program by the grammar grades followed. A boy's trio consisting of Lester Kinney, Donald Cleveland and Marvin Schmaedeke sang several numbers. Violet Jacobson played several solo numbers on the Hawaiian guitar and a trio consisting of Maria Uthe, Violet Jacobson and Alice Nicolai showed how quickly progress can be made by novices on the same instrument. Mr. Carlos Hall of Mokena their instructor, demonstrated in several snappy selections the possibilities of the Hawaiian guitar and his efforts were received with every evidence of appreciation by the audience.

An allegory, "Poppy Forget" was presented by the following grammar school girls: Cissie Doctor, Mae Reich, Mildred Uthe, Lucille Cooper, Bernice Rust, Ruth Arnold, Eleanor Cox, June Schussler and Dorothy Arnold. Lilas Kay acted as accompanist.

This little skit was coached by Mrs. Arnold and was well conceived and well acted by the participants and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

Refreshments always the piece of interest—were provided by several of the members in the form of delicious home made candies.

Several new members were added to the roll and President Arnold, on behalf of the organization urged all interested in the welfare of the school to join the association.

The grammar room won the membership attendance prize for this month.

ROAD HOG DITCHES TRUCK WITH 260 BUS. PEACHES; DRIVER HURT

Sunday Sept. 9th, a truck belonging to the Michigan Freight Co., of Benton Harbor, Michigan, loaded with 260 bushels of peaches was ditched on the Lincoln highway near Frankfort by a driver who hogged the road and forced Gerold George, the driver of the truck off toward the side of the road and he lost control of the truck which was ditched. The driver was quite painfully hurt and was taken back to Benton Harbor. The helper who was riding with him escaped injury. The freight company was notified and they sent out another truck and the peaches were reloaded and delivered to their destination in Moline. The truck was taken to the Cooper & Hostert garage at Mokena for repairs. The accident occurred at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Commission Form Petition Stirs Up Hot Fight In Will Co.

(By County News Service)

Petitions requesting that the proposition of establishing commission form of government for Will County be placed on the ballot at the November election was submitted to the board of supervisors at its session on Wednesday, causing a heated debate.

William H. Kirman of Lockport, John Conrad of Monee, Frank Heeg of DuPage, Joseph Shenk of Custer, and Frank S. Lambert of Plainfield were among those who spoke in opposition to the commission plan.

"Solicitors of signatures for this petition apparently did not explain the proposition to signers in an intelligent manner," Mr. Kirman declared. "One man telephoned me to ask what he had signed. Another stated that he had just signed the petition to accommodate the solicitor, who said he was to receive two cents a signature."

Not only did members of the board from the rural districts voice opposition to the plan, but John F. Kelly, representing the Central Trades and Labor council, was granted permission to speak in behalf of organized labor.

"Labor is against dictatorship," Mr. Kelly said. "It is not fair to take representation away from the people. Laboring men of Will county will fight the adoption of commission government."

The commission will be fought to a finish if it goes on the ballot. It is pointed out that vesting all power in three commissioners makes the commission form a dangerous political plumb and only a favored few would get a square deal. It is further pointed out that it would cost more to operate than it does under the present form. If the question goes on the ballot an intensive campaign against the proposed form will be begun. It is up to the rural districts to keep their eyes open and not let the oily politicians slip over a raw deal on them.

4,000 Petition for Cut In Salaries of Will County Officials and Employees

(By County News Service)

Drastic reductions in the salaries of all elective county officers and court house employees was requested in a petition signed by more than 4,000 persons and presented to the Will County Board of Supervisors at its meeting in Joliet Wednesday.

The salary reductions requested included: a 25 per cent cut for all elective officers; 40 per cent cut for janitors and jailers; clerk hire in the probate court to be paid out of the court's earnings; and elimination of most of the $10,560 paid at the present time for court bailiffs.

TINLEY PARK SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY SEPT. 19

The Tinley Park public school will open for the new term next Monday morning.

The board of education not being able on account of financial reasons to do anything with the kindergarten work, gave Miss Williamson permission to organize a class if she could get the parents to pay for her services. The board agreed to give her a room in the school for the kindergarten class and furnish the needed equipment. Miss Williamson made a survey of the village Tuesday but received very little encouragement. This does not mean that the people are not interested or question Miss Williamson's ability, but is due to the fact that so many parents are out of work and have not got the money. Whether the kindergarten work will be dropped, has not been decided as yet.

St. John's Evan. Congregation Mokena, Begins 70th Anniversary Celebration This Sunday

This coming Sunday will be a big day for the congregation of the St. John Evangelical church at Mokena as it marks a three day celebration of the 70th anniversary of the founding of the congregation by the pioneer forefathers of this section.

At first it had been planned to have a special celebration program every night for the week, but as this entailed too much work and difficulty it was decided to put on a 3 day celebration and put on worth while programs so two special services will be held Sunday, one in the morning and one in the evening.

On Wednesday night at 7:30 p. m. standard time the program will be given over to a band concert in the village park adjoining the church, the Tinley Park band of fifty pieces will furnish the music. Edwin Hirsch a former Mokena man, is the organizer of this band and will be here with them.

On Friday night a number of plays will be given in connection with other numbers.

Hundreds of people are expected to attend the celebration and many out of town people and former residents will attend.

A complete historical sketch of the 70 years of this congregation, together with pictures and a list of all the pastors who served this charge and a list of all the church organizations together with the official program for the entire celebration, appears in this paper this week. This writeup is as nearly complete as it has been able to make it from material available.

Special copies of the paper containing all the historical information and the official program will be on sale at the church at every service. The paper sales will be in charge of I. D. Marti. The extra copies have been donated by the News-Bulletin as its share toward this noteworthy celebration. The proceeds of the paper sales will go in the church fund.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Secretary
Illinois Press Association, CHICAGO

Governor Emmerson may call a special session of the legislature on September 6 for the purpose of considering new measures for unemployment relief. The call will be broad enough, it is expected, to take in various phases of relief activity but otherwise will be limited. A committee of ten has been named to begin drafting bills.

The Illinois unemployment relief commission allocated $628,037 to downstate counties and $3,750,369 to Cook county. We must keep in mind that all this money must be paid back to the source from which it came sooner or later, and if a bond issue is not voted the whole state will be taxed to pay the bill.

Senator Charles H. Thompson and S. L. Throckmorton, actuary-secretary of the Illinois Commission for the Study of Poverty and Dependency in Old Age, are working in Centralia and vicinity on a 10 per cent census of Marion county. The survey will determine what percentage of Illinoisans aged sixty-five years and over are in need of assistance. Marion county was selected because of the relation of its rural and urban districts.

The state department of public health will institute a more concentrated attack against diphtheria and other childhood diseases by reviving its nursing service. Hereafter state nurses will be assigned to one or more counties instead of covering a wide number of districts.

Based on returns from vacation centers of the state and gross motor fuel tax collections in Illinois for the first six months of 1932 as compared with the same period of 1931, a report issued by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce indicates that tourist travel in Illinois was considerably less than one-third under last year despite sub-normal conditions.

The Methodist church reunion and Illinois annual conference will be held at Springfield on Sunday, September 18. Bishop Ernest Lynn Weldorf and Bishop W. F. McDowell are named on the program as the speakers for the conference.

Walnut high school agricultural students won first place in the competitive array of instructive exhibits at the fair this year. Second place went to Orangeville high school's display, with Auburn high school in third place.

Half a million sightseers have paid their way into Chicago's Century of Progress exposition, although the opening date is still nine months away. Their curiosity has furnished the management with a nest egg of about $150,000, a sum which, officials say, will probably be considerably increased by June 1, 1933, when the fair opens. Public interest at 10 cents a person and the sale of floor space to exhibitors and concessionaires have inspired its promoters to predict the fair's success regardless of business conditions next year. "If we don't sell another foot of floor space we'll have the best fair yet," said Rufus C. Dawes, the president. "If we don't get another dollar we won't have to ask the guarantors for any more," said Col. Robert Isham Randolph, director of operations. The public was first admitted to the grounds in June. Since then gate receipts have shown a continuous gain. Thousands of dollars have already been spent at the concessions, the proprietors of which have turned back $45,580 to the fair management. Visitors have paid nearly $75,000 to inspect the reproduction of old Fort Dearborn. It cost $65,000 to construct. Exhibitors have purchased $4,000,000 worth of floor space and concessionaires have signed contracts for $3,000,000.

Intense interest was aroused at the Illinois Elks convention in Aurora on August 10 when Dr. Henry Bascom Thomas conducted a clinic for crippled children. The clinic and cases demonstrated a convincing argument for the good accomplished by the Elks' program for crippled children.

The anti-diphtheria campaign being waged by the state department of public health is preventing more than 1,000 deaths per year, compared with a decade ago, the department has announced.

If you will write to William J. Stratton, secretary of state, Springfield, Ill., he will be pleased to mail you free of charge a beautiful tourist guide with a hard road map of the state. This tourist guide points out many interesting spots in Illinois and tells you how to reach them by motor.

Getting Ready for Sally

While an Indianapolis woman was in the hospital with a new baby, her sister stayed at the home with the three boys. She put nails and hooks in the closets and impressed on them the necessity of hanging up their clothing. Bob returned from his first visit to view his little sister, and immediately asked for a hammer and some nails. Unable to figure out his desire, his aunt asked his reason and he replied:

"I want Sally to hang up her wraps when she comes home."

Keen bidding featured the recent sale of $1,000,000 State of Illinois 4 per cent waterway bonds. Seven bids were received and all were within a range of 1 point. The bonds were awarded to Halsey, Stuart and company, Chicago.

Grundy county is the home of both the healthiest farm girl and farm boy chosen at the 4-H club camp at the Illinois State fair. They are Miss Ruth Hoffman, fifteen, who lives near Morris but attends high school in Dwight, and Ronald Wilson, fifteen, of Morris.

The state department of public works and buildings has announced it will receive bids September 7 for the first series of road building projects to be financed by funds allotted to Illinois by the federal government for emergency highway relief work.

The Travel and Transport building, wonder structure of Century of Progress exposition, to be held in Chicago in 1933, will be dedicated on September 15, exposition officials have announced. This is the fourth structure to be opened in preparation for Chicago's enormous fair.

Regional conferences preceding the Illinois Conference on Social Welfare will be held from September 28 to October 7 in the following cities: Lawrenceville, Mt. Vernon, East St. Louis, Jacksonville, Quincy, Galesburg, Rock Island-Moline, Dixon and Geneva.

Patrol work and the aid of voluntary assistants to the warden have been instrumental in minimizing forest losses in the half-million acres of forested area in Illinois, Lewis B. Springer, superintendent of the forestry division, has reported.

A closely-waged contest is expected in the November elections when several southern Illinois counties cast their votes on the proposal to change from the supervisor to the commission form of government. Interest is particularly alive in Franklin, Saline and Williamson counties.

Although the entire program has not been completed as yet, several tentative plans have been approved for the G. A. R. national encampment in Springfield, September 18-23. The encampment next year will be held in Jacksonville in June.

Secretary of State William J. Stratton has rejected all bids previously received for the 1933 Illinois automobile license plates and ordered a new advertisement for bids to be received September 8. Under an opinion of the attorney general, it was impossible to award the contract for the manufacture of the plates to the department of public welfare, previous low bidder, it being planned to make them with convict labor at Joliet penitentiary.

Prominent citizens of Chicago, in letters received by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, chairman of the legislative committee on the consolidation of local governments, endorsed the committee's plan to submit definite recommendations for the consolidation of tax-spending bodies to the next session of the state legislature. The letters also commented favorably upon the technical survey being made on the committee's plan by Griffenhagen & Associates, which will probably be completed in October. The report of this organization is expected to be the basis upon which the Schnackenberg committee will urge the general assembly to eliminate or curtail many boards and bureaus now functioning at taxpayers' expense in the state. Among those endorsing the committee's work were: George W. Rosseter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce; Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the Chicago committee on public expenditures, and D. F. Kelly, chairman of the advisory board; J. Soule Waterfield, president of the Chicago Real Estate board; Henry P. Chandler, president of the Union League club; Francis E. Broomell, president of the Citizens' Association of Chicago; Arnold R. Baar, president of the City club of Chicago; Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park commissioners; Warren Wright, president of the Lincoln park commissioners; W. R. James, president of the west park commissioners, and officials of the Illinois Manufacturers' association and the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

Pointing out that 921 deaths have resulted from automobile accidents in Chicago for the year ending August 6, 1932—an increase of 19 over the corresponding period of last year—the Illinois Manufacturers' association issued a plea to all drivers to be more careful. The plea for safe and sane driving was directed mainly at the thousands of executives and employees in corporations belonging to the association. The association sent out in bulletin form a list of rules to be followed for safe driving.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT had a queer feeling inside. Yes, sir, he did. It wasn't a comfortable feeling. It was the feeling that he was going to see something dreadful happen, something which he couldn't stop, no matter how much he wanted to. You see from where he was sitting on the bank of the Laughing Brook below the Smiling Pool he looked right across to a big sandbank near the top of which was a hole which was the entrance to the home of Rattles the Kingfisher, and right down below him in the Laughing Brook was Billy Mink swimming straight across with his beady little eyes fixed on the doorway. He was swimming very fast, was Billy Mink, as if in a great hurry.

Peter guessed why Billy was in such a hurry. He guessed that Billy had guessed there were young kingfishers in that home in the sandbank, and that Billy, who has a liking for young birds, was in a hurry to get them for his dinner before Rattles, their father, should return from the Smiling Pool where he was fishing. Now Peter never harms anyone himself, and he cannot bear to think of anyone else being harmed, but he knows that Billy Mink cannot live on grass and vegetables and bark, as he can. So he knew that Billy was doing nothing wrong in trying to get a dinner of those young Kingfishers. He had been born a hunter, and he was simply obeying the natural instinct to fill his empty stomach. He was not breaking one of Old Mother Nature's laws. Billy Mink had simply been smart enough to do what Peter himself had done—find the home of Rattles the Kingfisher—and now it was for Rattles himself to protect his babies.

"Oh dear! Oh dear!" cried Peter.

Trimmed With Beaver

One of the latest of Parisian fashion creations in this wool and silk beige frock trimmed with beaver fur.

Still Peter wished with all his might that he could do something to save those babies. If only Rattles would come back! He even thought of running with all his might up to the Smiling Pool and warning Rattles of the terrible danger which his babies were in, but he knew that by the time he could do this it would be too late. If only Rattles would return! Billy had reached the shore and was standing perfectly still listening and sniffing. He took a step forward. At that very instant the harsh voice of Rattles sounded up the Laughing Brook. Like a flash Billy Mink turned and dived. Peter ducked out of sight with a sigh of relief. Down the Laughing Brook came Rattles with a tiny fish and vanished in the hole in the sandbank. There was nothing to warn him that anyone had been near.

It wasn't long before he was out again and off for another fish. The instant he was out of sight Billy Mink was once more at the foot of the sandbank. Where he had come from Peter didn't know. You know there is a saying that Billy Mink can hide in his own shadow. This time he promptly began to scramble up the bank. It was clear that he wanted to get those babies and get away before Rattles returned. Peter wished that something would happen to stop Billy. How he did wish it! But nothing did, save that the sand was so loose that it kept slipping under Billy's feet, and he made slow work of climbing up to that hole.

But at last he reached it. He sniffed cautiously, and it seemed to Peter that he could almost see a smile of satisfaction cross Billy's sharp little brown face. Then Billy put his head inside and his body followed.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" cried Peter. "Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" And big tears filled his eyes. But Peter wept too soon.

UNUSUAL BUTTERS

"HUNGER is the best sauce," we all know, and good sweet bread and butter is always a feast for the hungry. But for appetite that needs stimulating, these butters will help the tickling of the palate:

Herb Butter.

Mix one-half cupful of butter with one teaspoonful of chopped fresh parsley, one-half teaspoonful of powdered savory, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of white pepper. Keep in a cool place. Nice served over lamb chops or steak.

Horseradish Butter

Take one-half cupful of fresh butter and add one tablespoonful of fresh grated horseradish. Mix well with a fork and add one tablespoonful of minced parsley. Put into a jar and keep in a cool place. This is very good with fish.

Green Butter.

Take a small green onion, four sprigs of parsley, two branches of pepper grass or water-cress, one-half cupful of butter, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt and one-half spoonful of cayenne pepper. Mix well

Bound to Clear

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MY FRIEND Tom Wall ain't sad at all. For here's his letter here. It's dark today, but anyway, Tom says "it's bound to clear." 'Twas just a note that Tom Wall wrote (About a deal we had) That did not whine, without a line That said the times were bad.

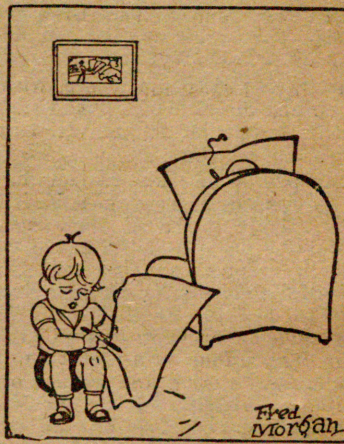

When skies of blue get gray (they do), Some men set down and quit. They might work on till clouds are gone,

But that, of course, takes grit. It's easier to say, "No, sir, It ain't no time to buy— It's rainin' cats and dogs, and that's No time to sell, or try."

He ain't (Tom Wall) that way at all. If it's too wet to plow, He'll build a bin to put things in A little while from now. It's rained before, will rain some more, And then the harvest's here. The world's all wet, but Tom's all set—

With deep interest he listened to their talk and their stories as the dinner was served. He felt rather drowsy while the men sat with their cigars and coffee talking of local politics. Nothing could have tempted him to yield to this feeling. Soon they came to the familiar theme of the murder of Oscar Perry.

"Are you seeking the guilty man tonight?" Shaw asked.

The colonel answered: "Strictly between ourselves I hope to show you the fellow that the Pinkerton men are after. I think that he knows who killed Perry and that's why I want him."

Shaw turned to the district attorney and said: "I guess that you know who killed Perry."

"It's a difficult problem, my friend. Twice I have thought that I knew the man. Then I have had to back-water. I had evidence enough to convict Bumpy Brown but it was artificial although very well made. The master mechanic who made it is the man we have come here to meet. I want to know him. He has an intellect."

Mr. Shaw told of an event which had begun to be a subject of gossip in Ogdensburg.

"I have heard that the bank robber disappeared from Ashfield in the evening of the first," he said. "That night near eleven o'clock a big stranger in a long ulster came into Perquette's saloon in our city. He bought a drink and some cigars and inquired how he could get across the river. A Frenchman who works for me happened to be there. The stranger made a bargain with him to be taken across in a rowboat. I would not have heard of it save for the fact that he gave the Frenchman a counterfeit five-dollar bill. For that reason he told me of the incident and showed me the bill, which the savings bank had refused to accept. I asked the Frenchman to describe him. He said that the stranger was about six feet tall; that his collar was turned up so that he didn't notice his ears. He did observe that the man wore a sandy beard. The thought came to me that it might have been a false beard."

"You were probably right," said Blake. "I have reason to believe that he arrived in Ogdensburg a little before the hour you mention and that he crossed the river that night."

At eleven o'clock all lights were extinguished on the yacht except those behind covered windows. A little later the colonel, and Shad in his makeup, and the sheriff with his loaded rifles were taken ashore in a small boat. Shaw and his men were to be on deck at a quarter of twelve ready to turn on the searchlight when they heard the boat's whistle in Blake's possession.

At last the stage was set, the actors in their places. The weather, as it had been for weeks, was remarkably mild for the time of year. Shad rehearsed his part. A night boat passed. They stood waiting. Suddenly they heard the measured beat of oars. Anxiously they listened as the sound drew nearer. A small boat was coming. The colonel and the sheriff stooped down among the barrels, their rifles in hand. Shad stood in the middle of the dock some twenty feet from its edge. The great trial of his life was closing in upon him. The boat drew near. A little way out from the dock it stopped.

The whistle sounded—one—two—three—in exact compliance with directions.

Shad answered with two whistles. The boat moved forward and touched the dock. A man came ashore.

The boy imitated Tram's voice to perfection when he said: "Let the boat go. A gentleman of your talents should not be traveling in rowboats. [Here he sniffed and grunted as Tram had done.] O'Brien is here with a steam yacht. Come on."

The newcomer paid and discharged his boatman. He turned, addressing his supposed comrade with a profane and affectionate oath of the Wild West. Shad made no answer but started at a fast walk toward the small custom house. The man followed.

Precisely at this point a thing happened which was not part of the program. The sheriff, in rising, shouldered against one of the barrels and created a startling noise. The stranger turned. It is likely that he saw the risen figures of Blake and Colewell. He flung off his coat. Like a sped arrow his form flashed through the darkness to the dock's edge and leaped into the water. He called to his boatman, now well out of sight. Neither the sheriff nor Colonel Blake had tried to stop him. The colonel blew his whistle. As they stood facing the dock's edge another form darted by them and tore into the river surface with a splash that wet their faces. It was the form of Shad, who had thrown off his two coats and was pursuing the fugitive. The searchlight was now shining on the dock and the two men. It swept the water, and in a second or so its ray was falling on the swimmers. What a hole in the night it made! Shad, as expert in water as a duck, was gaining. On he went, drawing nearer to the fugitive at every stroke. It was a thrilling contest bathed in that flood of golden light. In a moment Shad had caught the back of the man's collar and was hanging on. The fugitive turned and was trying to break his hold but could not. A boat and boatman drew up at the dock-side. Colonel Blake and the sheriff jumped aboard.

"Pull out to them as quick as you can," the colonel commanded. "We are not here just to see a swimming match."

The struggle in the river continued. The water boiled around the boy and his captive. Blake and those on the yacht were watching it with eager eyes. They could see that the desperado was tiring. In a moment he had given up trying to shake off the strong and agile lad who clung to his collar. The boat drew up to them. The colonel, who sat in the stern, took the hand of the boy, which was now disengaged. Thus with Shad's arm as a tow-line they hauled the boy and the exhausted criminal to the yacht's side.

"You needn't be afraid of him," said Shad. "I took his revolver out of his hip pocket and threw it away."

The two were pulled aboard.

"Sheriff, take this man to your room," said the colonel. "I'll bring a dry suit of clothes and a good stiff drink of hot whisky for him. I'm going to put this boy to bed and give him a rubbing. A first-class criminal and a first-class boy are not to be carelessly treated."

CHAPTER IX

The Doctor Makes a Discovery.

When, after a drink of hot water and a good rubbing, Shad ceased to shiver and was lying comfortably in bed Colonel Blake went to the sheriff's room. Algire, in the colonel's dry clothing, was sitting by the bed, his feet shackled. He was in a bitter mood. He greeted the district attorney with foul and profane words.

"Don't be nasty just because you've been outwitted," said Blake. "I'm going to treat you well as long as you're in my hands."

Algire shouted angrily: "I'd rather be in h—l than spend another day among the God-d—d Hicks in this part o' the country."

"Well, sir, every one in your line of business feels the same way about it," Blake answered with a smile of good nature. "If a man has anything on him it's about the most dangerous part of God's earth to be in."

There was a moment of silence.

The colonel went on: "I happen to know that you're an able chap. You oughtn't to be living the life of a fugitive. The best thing you can do is to clean your slate. Begin by telling what you know about the killing of Oscar Perry. If you'll do that I'll do what I can for you here and elsewhere."

The answer of the unfortunate man was rather decisive.

"Go to h—l," he said. "I know nothing about the Perry murder."

The district attorney gave up, knowing that no progress could be made while the criminal was in his present frame of mind.

The yacht had arrived at her dock in Ogdensburg. The party spent the remainder of the night aboard. Next day Shad, the colonel and the sheriff took the train to Canton with their prisoner whose resentment had not abated. He was still sullen and abusive.

Handsome Tribute This, to Women of America

I am grateful to the American women for having rejuvenated the faded and declining race of tourists. They have brought their dainty dresses, their pretty legs, their laughter, their naturalness and their fanaticism for pleasure and knowledge onto the boats and into the hotel lobbies, Paul Merand writes, in Vanity Fair.

Before they appeared on the pathways of the earth one met on the international highways only unapproachable old English ladies, Jewish merchants in fur-lined coats and German commercial travelers. It is for these charming ladies that during the last ten years steamers have rivalled each other in swimming pools and orchestras, hotels in flowers and new curtain and restaurants in original cocktails and shaved ice.

Formerly one traveled in one's oldest clothes. Today, thanks to them, touring is a series of smiles and fetes—and this morning as I embark in Egypt, at Alexandria, it is for their pleasure that the motor launches have been newly repainted and the dragomans have adorned themselves in beautiful silk robes of ash gray, almond green and canary yellow.

Portugal has some 930,264 square miles of colonial possessions and ranks after England and France. Its possessions are greater than those of Italy and the Netherlands.

That day Shad returned with more provisions to the little house at Brown's cove.

"I knew you'd be a-comin'," Bumpy shouted. "This mornin' I see a white swan in the sky. It means that a friend is comin'." By Jeedix! I've got suthin' good fer yer dinner an' don't you doubt it. The day you left I shot a wild goose on the marsh below here. I've been keepin' him. He's in prime shape."

"Keep him till tomorrow," Shad suggested. "I'll be Sunday. I'll go up and git Bony to come down."

"Exactly!" Bumpy exclaimed. "That's the caper. We don't really need that goose. You've brought some beef steak."

They had much to talk about. Shad told of his great adventure while they were at the table.

"By Jeedix! You ought to have fit at Gettysburg," said Bumpy. "I guess ye would if you'd 'a' been born an' was old enough."

"This place beats the world for good eating," Shad remarked, as he took another helping of the grilled steak.

When they had washed and put away the dishes Bumpy said: "If you're goin' to be a lawyer you've got to study. I don't want to hear another word from you till night. I've got some wood to cut and I'll git out o' yer way."

That afternoon, sitting comfortably by a window in the warm room, Shad began the reading of Blackstone's "Commentaries."

The colonel had let him take the first volume of the famous classic with the notion that it was like hitching a goat to a plow.

"It will be interesting to see what he says about it," he remarked as he took the first volume from its case. "I wonder if the lad will surprise me again. I rather think that this will stump him."

Shad was a courageous goat. When the light began to fade Bumpy came in. "How be ye gittin' along?" the old man asked.

"Good, but there's some words here that are not in my dictionary. What does 'contravention' mean?"

"I don't just exactly know," Bumpy answered as he put some wood on the fire. "I guess it has suthin' to do with politics. It's like a snag in the river. When I run on to one I push my boat off an' back up a little an' go 'round it."

"I've put down a list o' words that I've got to know about. I'll go up to the Dam early in the morning and see the doctor. He'll explain 'em to me."

Shad lighted the reading lamp. He found the story in which he and Bumpy had become interested and said: "Let's see what Pip and old Joe are doing."

"By Jeedix! You wait till I draw my boot an' loosen my belt an' git my pipe lit. I want to be good an' ready."

He drew his boot and lighted his pipe with a sliver at the stove hearth and hauled his armchair near the table, saying: "Now let 'er go."

Shad began reading. Meanwhile the parrot stood holding his head down near the bars of his cage on the window-sill and saying in a low gentle voice: "Hello, darling. Hello. Are you happy? Praise the Lord!"

It was as if some unseen hand were petting him. Shad paused a moment, looking up at the bird with a smile of amusement.

"Cur'ns, ain't it?" said Bumpy. "Betsy Brown is there rubbin' his head just as she used to. He sees her plain. He can feel her hand. I guess parrots' eyes can see things that we can't."

"Do you mean that her ghost is here?" Shad asked with a tingle in his nerves.

"I don't call it that. It's a kind of mean word. It ain't friendly. I'd say angel was the word. Don't mind it. Go on with yer readin'. She'll enjoy it as much as I do."

Soon they were both absorbed in the moving tale and smiling or laughing at its quaint humor. For more than two hours they sat entranced in that magic world of the great storyteller. The clock struck seven. The boy closed the book.

"I'm tired and hungry," he said. "Let's have a little snack of cold victuals."

"I could smash the clock," said Bumpy. "I didn't know book readin' could grab hold o' ye an' hang on so. Come to think of it, I'm hungry too."

Bumpy brought a snack of cold meat, doughnuts and cheese and a pitcher of cider from his keg in the cellar under the floor. They finished their snack and read on until bedtime. Bumpy as usual put heavy sticks on the fire, turned the damper, covered his bird with a shawl and hung the cage on a hook fastened to one of the cross-beams. As Bumpy got into bed yawning the boy heard him saying to himself.

The doctor looked down at his patient and shook his head doubtfully.

Crops Cost Least on Manured Land

Intelligent Soil Treatment Results in Profit for Farmer.

By F. H. CRANE, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Pointing the way to wider margins of profit for the farmer, results from 19 out of 26 Illinois soil experiment fields show that crops have been grown at the lowest cost under a system of soil treatment which included manure. On 16 of these 19 fields manure and limestone have been the most profitable soil treatment.

Manure ranks as the best general-purpose fertilizer. The manure from one horse or cow during a year contains as much nitrogen as a half ton or more of nitrate of soda, as much phosphate as 125 pounds of superphosphate, and as much potash as 200 pounds of muriate of potash.

Results for the past 20 years, not only from Illinois but also from Ohio, Pennsylvania and elsewhere, agree remarkably well in establishing a figure of $2 to $3 a ton as a reasonable and conservative value for a ton of manure. These values are based on its performance in improving crop yields. Taking the Illinois experiment fields as a whole, manure has increased wheat yields three and a half bushels an acre, corn yields ten bushels an acre, oats yields seven bushels an acre and hay yields one-third of a ton an acre.

Manure is an effective fertilizer on dark-colored soils as well as on light-colored ones, and is especially so on sand and alkali soils. On the Alledo, Hartsburg, LaMoille and Minonk fields, representing highly productive dark-colored soils, manure last year was worth $1.56 a ton as a yield improver. On medium productive soils it was worth $2.48 a ton. It had value of $4.49 a ton on the badly eroded hill land of southern Illinois and a value of more than $6 a ton on sand land, such as is represented by the Oquawka field.

Expenses of Cow Testing Really an Investment

Some farmers feel that joining a cow-testing association would only be an additional expense—an expense and not an investment, as it should be regarded.

Any business man would be willing to increase his investment if it would increase his net returns materially. Your cow-testing association can hardly increase your cream prices, but in many cases it can cut down on your costs of production so that your net returns will be greater. Can you produce butterfat at a cost of 11.4 cents per pound? One dairyman in the Pocahontas (Iowa) Cow Testing association did and others in the association aren't far behind in their costs of production. The average of the entire association was four and a half cents below the average price received for their butterfat. These dairymen's herds still are on the "good side" of the ledger.—Kenneth Littlefield, in an Iowa testing report in Hoard's Dairyman.

Care of Sows' Udders

Failure to wash the udders of sows, an important part of the swine sanitation plan, resulted in the loss of 100 pigs on a Whiteside county (Illinois) farm, reports Farm Adviser Shuman. The farrowing houses and pens had been thoroughly cleaned and scrubbed with boiling lye water. However, when the pigs came they lived about 72 hours and then died. Examination failed to reveal the cause, but at the suggestion of Dr. Robert Graham, University of Illinois, and State Veterinarian W. H. Welch, the udders of the sows that had not yet farrowed were washed with soap and water and then painted with iodine. The pigs that farrowed have been successfully saved. The swine sanitation plan, when completely carried out, is a remedy for a large number of diseases.—Prairie Farmer.

Soybeans Helpful

At the Michigan experimental station it has been found that cull beans, when valued from one-half to two-thirds of that of grain and the cost of cooking does not exceed one-quarter of their cost, produced pork, just as cheaply as did corn and tankage. The nutlike flavor developed in cooked soybeans also stimulates the porcine appetite, leading to faster growth and cheaper gains. At the Ohio station it was found that cooking this crop resulted in a saving of 115.7 pounds of feed for each 100 pounds of gain and after 30 weeks of feeding, pigs that received raw beans averaged 198 pounds in weight as contrasted with an average of 247 pounds for those receiving the cooked beans but limited to the same amount of total feed as the raw bean group.

Potato Yield Doubled

Yields of late potatoes were increased 102 per cent in Cook county, Ill., by five applications of bordeaux mixture. This treatment increased yield of No. 1 potatoes in the early crop 27 per cent and the total yield 56 per cent. The season was dry and foliage diseases gave little trouble. Most of the benefit was from control of leaf hoppers. The tests were supervised by specialists for the Illinois experiment station, according to an article in Capper's Farmer.

POULTRY

OPEN SEASON NOW FOR WAR ON PESTS

Get Rid of Mites and Collect More Eggs.

By C. F. PARRISH, Extension Poultryman, North Carolina State College. WNU Service.

During the rush season, owners of farm flocks of poultry forget the birds and as a result mites and lice get to work with a resulting decrease in the number of eggs laid, and the effort of the chickens to roost on a tree limb rather than in the poultry house.

This is the season when the annual war begins between mites on the one hand and eggs on the other. Poultrymen act as spectators but pay a stiff admission price to witness the battle. Neglect of the flocks at this time invites enemies of good poultry husbandry to get busy, and chief among these is the well-known mite. The insect infests poultry houses, usually hiding away under the perches during the day but preying upon the birds at night, sucking their blood, lowering their vitality and thereby decreasing egg production.

Here are some of the ways in which mites may be eradicated. First, do not nail down the roost poles fast to the supports. If they are nailed, knock them loose. Then spray the roosts, and the whole house, if needed, with old burnt cylinder oil mixed with equal parts of kerosene.

Second, paint or spray the roost with carbolineum, as recommended in Farmers' Bulletin 801 of the United States Department of Agriculture. Past history shows that mites have won every war in which they have engaged unless outside aid is given, and now that every source of farm income is needed by the owner, time should be given to eradicate poultry parasites to the extent that the birds may give their highest production.

Hatchery Best Method of Maintaining Flock

There are three principal ways by which poultry flocks are maintained from year to year. These are: the sitting hen, the farm incubator, and the hatchery; and the most satisfactory source of chick supply is the hatchery, because of the fact that the whole problem of brooding, rearing and production, being on a highly uniform basis, is simplified.

A farmer is not really in the poultry business until he has at least 100 laying pullets. A flock of at least this size makes it possible for him, particularly if located near a large market, to sell his eggs direct to the retailer, getting the benefit of higher prices than are possible when eggs are sold through the usual trade channels.

To ensure a pullet flock of 100 birds in the fall it is necessary to start with around 250 chicks. Where chicks are purchased from the breeder hatchery or the commercial hatchery any desired number can be started at a given time, and the problem of management, brooding, rearing and feeding is simplified. What is more important, the pullets in the flock mature at the same age and go into the laying house in a condition suited to high production.

Darkens Hen Nests

Hens on the George Wehrman farm, Sumner county, Kansas, used to break a lot of eggs. Hens ready to go on the nests would fly on the steps and fight with hens that were on the nests and the result was cracked and broken eggs. Mr. Wehrman stopped that loss by attaching burlap to the top of the nests and letting it hang down over the front. Now hens fly to the end of the step, walk along the step until they find an empty nest and enter it, instead of trying to take a nest that already is occupied. Seemingly a hen doesn't like to have her feathers ruffled. That is what happens to her if she backs against the burlap to fight another hen. It is probable that the darkness created by the burlap also has a tendency to lessen the fighting. —Capper's Farmer.

Poultry Hints

Provide roosts for the young growing birds. When these are available they will not pile up at night and smother in the hot corners of the brooder houses.

Providing plenty of shade for the yards is one way of protecting the flock from the hot weather. If there is not sufficient natural shade, artificial shelter can easily be provided with boards, canvas, or brush.

Prevention is the safe way to raise turkeys. Keep the old birds away from the young. Hatch eggs in an incubator.

There is no profit in feeding hens which do not lay, and this is the season when many decide to go on vacation. Learn to pick out the slackers and sell them for meat.

Feeds which are processed the least and which represent more nearly the whole product are safest to use when making a chick ration.

Rock Island

Heavy Tax Payer

The following letter has been sent to August Maue, Will County Supt. of Schools by Hal S. Ray of the Public Relations Department of the Rock Island railroad relative to the taxes paid to Will County by the railroad and to the unfair bus competition:

This year the Rock Island Railroad paid in school taxes in your county, $32,197.68. The ability of the railroad to continue to pay taxes depends on the treatment accorded it in comparison with other forms of transport which pay comparatively little taxes.

The railroads are asking, therefore, that commercial motor vehicles operated for private profit on the public highways, as well as waterway transport, be given the same kind and measure of regulation as that applied to the railroads, and that public subsidies, in the form of free rights of way to commercial trucks and buses and government aid to waterways through public taxation, be adjusted so the railroads may have an equality of opportunity in the transportation field.

The railroads are hopeful that the public, through the state legislatures as well as through Congress, will see fit in the near future to remedy the situation outlined above, and it is our thought that your interest in the public schools of your county will inspire you to lend your influence and support toward bringing about the needed remedy, and that some favorable resolution on this matter may be adopted at the next session of your state Association.

The Railroad Executives Association has adopted a general program for the relief from unnecessary governmental restrictions of railroads and for the regulation of competing modes of transportation, which will be presented for consideration at the forthcoming December session of Congress, according to a press release from the Rock Island Lines which quotes the following from the "United States Investor":

"None of us should favor any action by legislature of other public authority that would deny the public every possible advantage from modern invention. The truck, for example should not be denied a fair chance to serve the public on the mere objection that truck competition means loss to the railroads. In carving out a field of usefulness for itself, however, the truck should stand squarely on its own feet. Its right to exist does not include the right to lean upon the public for financial support. It should pay fairly for the benefits it gets from the public treasury, and should assume the full fledged responsibility of common carriers."

WATCH YOURSELF GO BY

Say, what's the use in taking stock
In all the things we hear?
Why rip the lining out of men
And make them look so queer
You cannot always tell, my boy—
Perhaps it's all a lie.
Just get around behind a tree
And watch yourself go by.

You may find things look different,
The crooked paths more straight;
That they are not the only ones
That sometimes stay out late.
Perhaps your wife's own husband
Sometimes gets awry.
You'd better get behind a tree
And watch yourself go by.

In business, as in pleasure,
Or in the social life,
It doesn't always pay, my boy,
To let yourself run rife.
So try to do the best for those
Who in your pathway lie,
And sometimes get behind a tree
And watch yourself go by.

Shanghai has been front page news of late, and Shanghai and San Francisco are brought close together in this picture of three little Chinese maids. For Isabel May Loo, in the center, is holding a telephone directory published in Chinese for the inhabitants of San Francisco's Chinatown, while May Jow and Mary Jow hold copies of the Shanghai telephone directory. Isabel is the granddaughter of Loo Kum Shu, first manager of the San Francisco Chinatown central office, which was established in 1894 and is the only central office in this country where calls are handled almost entirely in a foreign language.

A Supper You Can Get Right After Breakfast

By Sarah Blackwell
Coffee Service Institute

A PORCH supper is to me the perfect end of a hot summer's day. Tempting sandwiches, a crisp salad, a light dessert, and glasses of ice-cold coffee set out on a card-table in buffet style never fail to cheer my warm, weary family.

One of the nicest features of the porch supper is the preparation of it which can be made in the cool of the morning, rather than in the hot part of the afternoon in a still hotter kitchen. Carefully planned, the meal can be assembled a few minutes before serving.

A wide variety of sandwiches can be made ahead of time, wrapped in waxed paper and put in a cool place. These include sandwiches of brown bread and cream cheese, white bread with date and nut paste, cheese and olives on brown or white bread, anchovy paste and cream cheese, peanut butter and raisin bread.

The always popular potato salad or any of the molded gelatin salads such as tomato jelly salad, vegetable ring, or ham mousse, are made early and put in the refrigerator to be served easily and attractively at the last minute, with crisp lettuce and chilled mayonnaise. Fresh berries, or fruit whips, are unfailing favorites for the porch supper dessert.

Of course in hot weather the most important part of any meal is the deliciously cool drink. The one my family likes best, and quite economical now is iced coffee. Nearly every one knows how to make iced tea, but fewer people know the simple secret of good iced coffee. Iced coffee must be freshly made, just before serving, and poured into tall glasses well filled with cracked ice. Coffee left over from breakfast, or coffee put away to chill in a refrigerator, is never so good, as coffee loses its fragrance and flavor when it stands long after making. Since the ice naturally dilutes the coffee, you should use twice the usual amount to each cup of water, in brewing. And, important, too, is the correct grind for your method—coarse for pot, medium for percolator, and fine for drip. Fresh coffee, freshly ground, and brewed double strength are the simple rules for perfect iced coffee. Sugar and cream to taste and whipped cream, if you like it, gives the glasses a 40-below-zero look that will revive anyone on a 90-in-the-shade day.

He Teaches Children in a Great Big Way

That the dial telephone is simple to use is shown by the fact that over one-third of the telephones in the Bell System are dial operated. One of the best ways to teach people how to dial is to instruct children, who will carry the information to their elders. In this picture, E. A. Cahill is demonstrating to a class of Philadelphia school children the proper way to dial, using a loud speaker and a giant working model of a telephone dial.

One out of Five Persons in Will Co., Receiving Aid

(By County News Service)

Declaring that one out of every five persons in Will County is receiving aid from agencies affiliated with the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, Miss Martha Phillips, in charge of the state relief organization, appeared before the Will county board of supervisors Tuesday, requesting the appointment of a relief worker for the townships of the county outside Joliet.

Such a worker, who would co-ordinate relief agencies in the townships, would receive a salary from the state fund. She requested the board to provide transportation for this work.

At the present time, Miss Phillips said, six townships were receiving state aid in their relief work, three have just made application for aid, while no requests have been received, as yet, from fifteen.

Supervisor Albin Anderson of Lockport township, Supervisor Fred Francis of New Lenox, and others urged the board to co-operate with the state by providing transportation for the requested worker.

After considerable debate, the proposition was referred to the finance committee for action.

The popular low-priced Thor washer is pictured above—now only $69.50 cash—only $69.50 down "Little by Little". Same model with "skirt" is only $49.50 cash—$49.50 down.

Hundreds of women are doing their own washing today who never did it before. No wonder! Electric washers have never been priced so low—they save you a dollar or more every week on your laundry bill. There's no hard work, either. You simply load the tub and the agitator rubs clothes clean. (No preliminary soaking is necessary.) A motor-driven wringer gets clothes ready for the line. In two hours the average wash is done. Let us demonstrate in your home. No obligation.

Celebrating 70th Anniversary

Noted Progress Revealed Throughout the Years Gone by.

Pioneers Organized First Congregation In Civil War Days

Selection and evaluation are usually the primary tasks of the historian. From the mass of facts that confront him the chronicler must choose the relevant and important. His work thus involves elimination of the irrelevant as well as selection of the relevant.

The church historian is in an altogether different position. Because he has so few facts he eagerly records whatever facts come within his purview. Statistical records he finds in abundance, for almost all pastors are faithful in that direction. But besides such material the scarcity of historical data is deplorable.

Any church organization may be regarded as the expression of a group of people who have a common experience to share and perpetuate. Man has discovered that those experiences which he values most can be conserved and increased only so far and so long as he shares these experiences. Religious people have made a great discovery about the universe and about themselves. In order to conserve this experience of supreme good such like-minded people band themselves together in congregations and church organizations. A church fulfills its mission when, through its worship program, it provides opportunity for a renewal of religious experience. It must also provide the individual with moral purposes and adequate ideas with which to interpret his experience.

In 1842 there was a great exodus of Germans from Europe to America. Many of these newcomers were pious people and at once set about to establish churches of their own faith in the new land. Since a majority of these settlers had been members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Germany or Switzerland, the new churches were accordingly patterned after that denominational order.

Quite a number of years before the organization of St. John's, missionary work had been done here by the Reverends C. Haas, Kolb and Gradmann.

On January 1, 1862, Rev. Wm. Meyer took charge of this mission work. Arrangements were made to meet all Evangelical Christians of the community on a certain day. On March 1, 1862, a meeting was held at the schoolhouse of Mokena and after the services the organization of the German United Evangelical St. John's Church was perfected.

A few weeks later the first steps were taken toward erecting a church building. The lots on the south-east corner of the Mokena village park were chosen and soon the frame church was completed and the young congregation and its pastor were glad and thankful to possess their own church home. It was dedicated on September 20th, 1862.

After nine years of faithful service, Rev. Wm. Meyer resigned from his pastorate on January 2, 1871. He was succeeded by Rev. A. Schoenhuth who began his work on July 2, 1871, but his stay was of rather short duration. During his pastorate the first parsonage was bought.

In the month of February, 1873, Rev. C. Schaub took charge of the parish, a field more than ordinarily difficult. Under his wise leadership conditions became normal. New church furnishings, a church bell, pipeorgan, and art glass windows in the church, as well as an addition to the parsonage were among the timely improvements. Serving this congregation for a whole generation, Rev. C. Schaub laid down his work here at the end of the year 1906. On January 2, 1910, after a long and severe illness, the faithful worker for Jesus Christ closed his eyes in death and was tenderly laid to rest

January 4th in the St. John Cemetery where his mortal remains will slumber in peace until the great resurrection day.

In January 1907, Rev. G. H. Sieveking became pastor of St. John's. During his pastorate of eight years the work in St. John's made steady progress. In fact, some great things were done by pastor and people. He made special efforts to keep the youth of the congregation together by organizing singing societies and introducing English evening services once a month. His work of self denial and faithfulness in the church ceased when he accepted a call from the Immanuel Church of Evansville, Indiana.

Rev. Mr. Sieveking was succeeded by Rev. F. Bosold, who served the congregation for nearly three years. His efforts largely limited themselves to the continuation of what had already been inaugurated. His stay with St. John's terminated when he accepted a call from the St. Paul's Church, Mannheim, Ill.

Rev. Wm. Kreis

The Builder

On August 26, 1917, the Rev. Wm. Kreis entered upon his activities as successor to Rev. F. Bosold. His rare executive and pastoral abilities at once bore fruit in many material and spiritual ways. The dedication of the new St. John Evangelical church building was the supreme material achievement of his ministry.

Pastor and congregation realized that the growth of St. John's necessitated more room. The church work had been hampered by crowded quarters and limited equipment. For a number of years there was talk about a new church. Gradually this talking resulted in doing something definite when the Brotherhood took the lead. A building fund was created February 3, 1919, and several members offered a substantial donation for a new building. At the business meeting, May 14th, a petition was drawn up, asking the Board of Trustees to call a special meeting of all the members of the church on Wednesday May 28, 1919, for the purpose of considering the needs of building a new house of worship.

Soon thereafter the project was laid before the congregation where it received unanimous approval. A committee of fifteen was appointed to solicit subscriptions for funds and in a few weeks the sum of over $19,000 was subscribed. Another step forward was made on January 2, 1920, when the congregation appointed a Building Committee to work in conjunction with the Church Board to prepare preliminary plans and get estimates of the cost of the new church. These good men went to work immediately to make preparations for such an undertaking. A number of modern church edifices were carefully inspected and studied to guide them in the planning of the new edifice. The building committee was fortunate in selecting for its adviser and professional guide the firm of Mr. Leonard Stuebe & Co., of Danville, Illinois.

Few outsiders will realize what a volume of work had to be done by the committee and sub-committees before the first spade could be turned. Session after session was held. Each one extended close unto the midnight hour. Obstacles were surmounted that seemed insurmountable and critical periods were bridged over until the solution of the particular problem was reached. But these men gave cheerfully of their time, energy and money, knowing it was done for the glory of God and the extension of His work in our midst.

The third forward step was the purchase of the building site for the new church home known as the Noble Jones place, a beautiful plot at the southwest corner of the village park, for the consideration of $4,000 and the selection of a soliciting committee of forty-nine men and women from every organization of the church and from the congregation at large. The purpose of this committee was to raise more money for the building of the new edifice. Special speakers presented the matter in all organizations and letters were sent to every home explaining the plan and method of pledges and date of canvass. The date selected for canvass was October 17 to October 31st. The morning service was devoted to the object of the campaign. Canvassers were commissioned with prayers. A large cross with gold stars was used to show the progress. The Fund Raising Campaign for St. John's New Church was a phenomenal success. The sum total of $33,000.00 in subscriptions and pledges was obtained. Thus the first great forward move toward the New St. John's church was made. In the meeting of the congregation January 3, 1921, a resolution was passed authorizing the building committee to proceed with the construction of the new church in accordance with the plans adopted by the congregation.

The high cost of building made it advisable, however, to wait until things had become more normal. Mr. Leonard F. Steube was chosen architect. The contract for excavating, brick work and carpenter work was awarded to G. W. Montgomery of Sidell, Illinois for the consideration of $37,600.00. Ground was broken for the new church on April 19th, 1922 and the cornerstone was laid on Sunday afternoon, June 18th. Impressive services marked the occasion. Hundreds of members and friends of St. John's were present to witness the ceremony. The speakers of the day were Rev. G. Lambrecht, of the St. Peter's church of Frankfort (now deceased) and Rev. W. E. Uhrland. Rev. Mr. Kreis (also deceased) laid the cornerstone, assisted by all visiting ministers and the members of the building committee. The new church home of St. John's is architecturally speaking very beautiful. The style is English Gothic and the building is modern in every respect. In front are two graceful and beautifully proportioned towers, the larger being sixty feet in height. The exterior is laid up with soft tones of red vitrified brick and white mortar. Trimmings are of Bedford limestone. The roof is covered with red asbestos tile.

The interior of the building is plastered with a gray sand finish plaster and the woodwork is white oak stained dark. The art glass windows, altars, altar, pulpit, and pews were designed by the architect and this has resulted in a pleasing and harmonious effect. The main auditorium and the balcony seats about 500 people. On the main floor is also the pastor's study and a mother's rest room. The basement has spacious class rooms, kitchen, cloakrooms, heating plant and a stage for entertainments.

All the church furniture, altar coverings and draperies, carpets and the equipment of the dining room and kitchen were furnished by the Ladies of St. John's.

The aggregate cost of the church was approximately $60,000.00. Almost two-thirds of the entire cost had been pledged by subscriptions and donations of members, societies and good friends of St. John's.

In 1925 Rev. Mr. Kreis having accepted a call to Dolton, Illinois, the Rev. Wm. Cramer was elected as minister to St. John's. Rev. Mr. Cramer served until 1929. During his stay the present parsonage was purchased.

Rev. G. G. Bratzel became the successor to Rev. Mr. Cramer and remained until June 28, 1931.

On August 2, 1931 the present minister, Rev. Theodore Lapp entered upon his duties as successor to Rev. Mr. Bratzel. There are no great material achievements to record but the church grounds have been much improved with shrubbery and trees so that the church building at last has a suitable setting. Two coats of paint have been applied to all the exterior woodwork of the church and we trust that all will rejoice at the improvement in appearance.

The value of the dollar has increased so much that we find it rather difficult to meet all of the obligations incurred during a period of cheap money. However, with the help of God and the continued co-operation of all the church members and friends, the congregation of St. John's faces the future with joy and confidence praying not for the removal of all obstacles, but for the faith and strength to overcome and forge on to glorious victory.

22,000 Persons Served Lord's Supper in 70 Yrs

While statistics are never a true index of the spiritual function exercised by any church, they are nevertheless, important as an indication of the role played by religion in the great critical periods of human life.

Anthropologists agree with students of the history of religions that there has probably existed no tribe or primitive people in whose life religious practices are totally absent.

It is especially during the crisis of life: birth, initiation into the tribe, marriage, death, disease, famine, and great catastrophes, that men everywhere have always sought right relationships with an extra-human power.

Men to-day are no different as every church record will show. People who ordinarily have no relationship with the church and organized religion will in times of crisis, seek the offices of religion in the hope of averting the greatest evils and gaining the greatest blessings.

St. John during the seventy years of its existence has ministered to its members and community in a variety of ways. The records show a total of 1862 baptisms, 1,065 confirmations, 423 marriages and 855 funerals. Some 22,000 people have participated in the Sacrament of Holy Communion.

It is always a difficult matter to classify all individuals who have connections with a church into hard and fast categories. Some, although not officially members, contribute regularly; others, although members do not or cannot contribute. St. John, however, counts some 200 contributing members. Of this number at present the congregation has a total indebtedness of $17,000. Of this sum, $13,000 are in bonds held by church members.

Rev. Theo. Lapp, Present Pastor of St. John's Church

Rev. Theo. E. Lapp

The present pastor graduated from Elmhurst Junior College in 1924, and from Eden Theological School at Webster Groves, Mo., in 1927. In the spring of 1929 he received the A. B. Degree from Heidelberg College at Tiffin, Ohio. In 1931 he was granted the B. D. Degree of Eden Seminary, and in the spring of 1933 he will be eligible for the G. T. M. Degree of the Chicago University Divinity School. The Rev. Mr. Lapp served charges at Fostoria and Toledo, Ohio before his coming to Mokena.

List of Ministers

Who Have Served St. John's Church

The following pastors have served the St. John Evangelical congregation in Mokena since its organization in 1862:

Rev. Wm. Meyer, Jan. 1, 1862 to January 2, 1871.
Rev. A. Schoenhuth, 1871 to 1873.
Rev. C. Schaub, February 1873 to December 1906.

Rev. G. H. Sieveking, January 1907 to 1915.

Rev. F. Bosold, 1915 to 1917.

Rev. Wm. Kreis, August 26, 1917 to 1925.

Rev. W. J. Cramer, 1925 to 1929.

Rev. G. G. Bratzel, October 1929 to June 28, 1931.

Rev. Theo. E. Lapp, August 2, 1931.

In all nine ministers have served St. John's during the seventy years of its existence. Of the former pastors only three are still living; the Rev. W. J. Cramer who is serving the Melrose Park, Illinois congregation; Rev. G. H. Sieveking is serving a charge in Maytown, Ill., and the Rev. G. G. Bratzel is the pastor of the Evangelical church at Fribault, Minnesota.

Organizations

While human nature remains anything like it is at present, organizations will always be a sine qua non of effective action. The church because it is composed of individual expressions of human nature cannot, therefore, escape this general requirement. An institution may be over or under-organized, but the division into leaders and followers is inescapable. In a democratic institution, however, this dividing is neither permanent nor inviolable.

THE CHURCH COUNCIL

The men who have been chosen to represent the congregation officially in this year of our seventieth anniversary are: Emil Cappel, President; Benedict Young, Vice-President; Arthur Beagley, Secretary; Karl Krapp, Financial Secretary; Edward Schmidt, Treasurer; and Immanuel D. Marti. A financial depression of the present scope and duration affects every institution. The present church council as well as the previous one has co-operated admirably with both pastor and congregation in discharging its duties both courageously and well.

THE WOMEN'S UNION (LADIES' AID)

The organization of the Ladies' Aid was effected in 1873 under the leadership of Rev. and Mrs. C. Schaub. The object of the society is to further particularly the interests of the St. John Congregation and in general the interests of the community. Since its inception the society has donated thousands of dollars to the Church. It has had as its primary object the retirement of the church bonds.

At present the membership of this active organization numbers some 110. At present Mrs. E. P. Krapp is president. She has served faithfully and efficiently in this capacity for fifteen years. No small amount of the success of the Union is directly attributable to her abilities and activity. The other officers are: Mrs. H. Schweser, Vice-President; Mrs. Bechstein, Recording Secretary; Mrs. John Mattes, Financial Secretary and Mrs. A. Pfeleger, Treasurer.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL (SUNDAY SCHOOL)

Everyone who is convinced of the significance and importance of religion has come to appreciate the function of religious education. The Church-School plays an indispensable role in the great task of giving children and adults systematized religious instruction. The St. John Church School has not been unmindful of the modern trends in the field of religious education, and has not hesitated to avail itself of what has seemed fruitful and significant in such movements. The adequate preparation of those who would teach has not been overlooked. The closely graded lesson material has been gradually and more widely introduced in order to meet more adequately the needs and abilities of different age groups. At the present time the Church School has an enrollment of some 140 mem-

Tragedy Plunges Family of Pastor In Deep Sorrow

A terrible tragedy threw the family of Rev. Wm. Kreis, beloved former pastor of St. John's into deep sorrow the latter part of June of this year when Rev. Mr. Kreis was killed in an automobile accident near Odell, Ill., and his son Arthur was seriously injured and lay for weeks between life and death in the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet. He is on the way to recovery now.

The great throng which attended the final rites for Rev. Mr. Kreis held in the church which he built, indicated in what love and esteem he was held by his former congregation. He was laid to rest in the St. John Cemetery south of Mokena.

So ended the good work of this faithful servant of the Lord.

70th Anniversary Program: The St. John Evangelical Church

Rev. Wm. Kreis The Builder

The above photo shows Rev. Wm. Kreis and family when the former was pastor of the St. John church. Rev. Mr. Kreis was a builder and the beautiful new St. John Evangelical church in which the seventieth anniversary of the congregation is now being celebrated, is a monument to his labors and achievements. Rev. Mr. Kreis entered into his everlasting reward in June of this year.

Scene at Cornerstone Laying of St. John's June 18, 1922

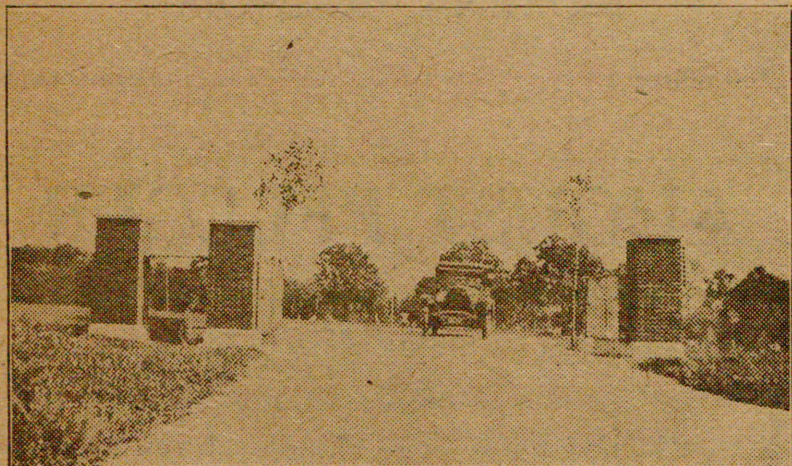

The above picture shows the scene at the cornerstone laying of the new St. John Evangelical church in Mokena on Sunday afternoon, June 18th, 1922. Impressive services marked the occasion. Hundreds of members and friends of St. John's were present to witness the ceremony.

The speakers of the day were Rev. G. Lamrecht and Rev. W. E. Uhrland.

Rev. Wm. Kreis, then pastor of St. John's, laid the corner stone, assisted by all visiting ministers and the members of the building committee.

Entrance Scene To St. John's Cemetery, Mokena

The above scene shows the entrance way to the beautiful St. John Cemetery.

Since the year 1863 the church has its own burial ground located just south of the village limits of Mokena which offers a beautiful place for the departed ones. St. John's Cemetery is one of the largest and most beautiful cemeteries in this vicinity. Perpetual care can be provided for any lot, present or former purchase.

RELIGION WAS VITAL FACTOR IN LIVES OF PIONEERS

It was in the early days of 1842 when the first German speaking families came here from Europe to settle down as small farmers and farm hands. They were mostly pious people in whose life religion was a vital factor. They had been members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Germany or Switzerland and it was no more but natural for them to desire the establishment of a church of their own faith in their new home.

St. John Organizations

THE BROTHERHOOD

The Brotherhood was organized September 16, 1917 with 21 members. This membership has grown slowly but steadily until we now count some fifty names on the list. The organization usually gives a picnic annually and contributes generously to the support of the church both financially and morally. This year the organization in recognition of its responsibility to the youth of the community became sponsor for the Boy Scout activities. The present officers are: Mr. Lawrence Kohl, President; William Lauffer, Vice-President; Charles Erickson, Secretary; Robert Yunker, Financial Secretary and Ervin Marti, Treasurer.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S LEAGUE

Youth is the period of adjustment. It is the privilege of youth to indulge in a great deal of nonsense and in much play. But youth also dreams its dreams and thinks seriously about life and the problems that confront it.

Our League makes no apologies for opening its membership to all young people of the community regardless of their church affiliation. If we cannot learn to play and work with those of different opinions in our youth, it is probable that the art will never be learned.

The League has increased its membership from some 22 at the beginning of the year to the present number of some 60 members. Under the leadership of Mr. Leon Tonn the young people find expression for their energies and abilities in group singing and drama. The church has released what the Catholic church never forgot that worship may be promoted through drama. The League is giving much time to the consideration of worship through the drama.

In commenting on the League, one of the church leaders says:

"We should not expect much financial aid for our church from the activities of our young people. Nevertheless, the League has given financial assistance to our treasury during the past year."

The League meets once monthly to enjoy a period of worship, discussion, and play.

The active officers for the year are:

- Owen Maue, President
 Clarence Lauffer, Vice-President.
 Wilbur Mancke, Secretary
 Elmira McGovney, Fin. Secretary
 Milton Woodrich, Treasurer

THE BOOSTER

The successful work of the modern church depends upon effective publicity. The "Booster", the parish paper goes into some 200 homes every month to acquaint the members and friends with all of St. John's activities. Mr. William Lauffer has been the business manager for the paper for many years. He has given liberally much effort and time to this enterprise.

MUSIC

The church is not able to point out many musical organizations. Organizations of former days such as the church choir, Brotherhood chorus and the Junior Choir are no longer in existence. For many reasons it is a most difficult task to organize and maintain a volunteer choir. Until recently the church depended largely upon Mr. Tonn's generosity for countless solos and upon such occasional talent as might be secured. However, the church is now able to depend upon two organizations for the church music. A women's choir under the direction of Mrs. E. Krapp rehearses regularly and beautifies the church services with their harmony. A Young People's Choir composed of League members and under the leadership of Mr. Tonn is usually available on alternate Sundays.

THE ST. JOHN CEMETERY ASSOCIATION

It is well known that the congregation owns the beautiful burial ground just south of Mokena. There has been some agitation to divorce the Association from the congregation, but to date no actual steps have been taken in this direction. The affairs of the Association have been administered by a group of eight men elected by the congregation. At present W. C. Schmuhl is president and Fred Cappel, Secretary.

Uncle Sam Is A Hard Competitor

Uncle Sam may print envelopes in competition with local printers, do dental work in competition with dentists, he can loan money, run banks, conduct commercial shipping, handle railroads, buy wheat, sell groceries, and operate mills, but there is one thing that he cannot do, he cannot make any money or pay any dividends in conducting all this business. The taxpayer, who is called upon to meet all the deficits, has found this out. Just as the government is going into business, thousands of people are going out. In the meantime, taxes have increased in the Federal government by 730% and those who still have a "going business" find it hard to pay this increase in taxes, much less meet Uncle Sam's competition, according to officials of the Minnesota Taxpayers Association.

America's greatness is built, not upon political officiousness, but upon the industry and the thrift of the rank and file of the American people.

When the government eventually finds its way back to its proper sphere, when it quits competing with its own taxpayers, when it commences again to deal successfully with crime, with taxes, and other functions, and when the individual learns over again that individual responsibility represents opportunity, we will again enjoy the fruits of our labor and our inventive genius, and we will get back to our normal prosperous condition.

TELEPHONE VOICE IN BUSINESS—Jerseyville, Ill., News.
When a person calls up a business office, he gets a very different impression from the different voices that answer him. Sometimes the reply will come from a languid and wearied voice, that seemed to have been out late the night before, and to take no personal interest in the question. You feel instinctively that you will get no intelligent help from the man or woman behind that voice.
But if someone answers the call with a cheery and interested voice, how it does promote confidence. The manner in which its office help answers telephone queries has quite a little to do with a concern's success. The indifferent youths who answer with so little spirit and earnestness should realize that their indifference is noted in their own office and will count against their promotion.

Grand Opera at Stadium Open to All

Real, dignified, artistic and impressive Grand Opera will be given to Chicagoland music lovers when Mr. Maurice Frank in association with the Chicago Stadium presents the first of a series of Saturday night Grand Opera performances at the Chicago Stadium, on Saturday night, October 15th.

For the first time in the history of Chicago, a bonafide, enthralling performance of Grand Opera will be offered to the public, rich and poor alike at popular prices.

Artists from the former Chicago Civic Opera Company and the Metropolitan Opera Company will be engaged along with units from the Chicago Civic including the famous chorus and orchestra. Every effort is being lent to make the initial appearance of REAL, popular priced Grand Opera in Chicago a spontaneous success as well as an artistic achievement.

The tedious task of casting for the first performance has commenced and the first to be engaged for the forthcoming historic event was the famous maestro, Jacques Samossud, Russian conductor of International fame who comes to Chicago from his many years of success as the Musical Director of the National Opera Company of Washington, D. C.

Unhampered by the intrigue, jealousies, hatreds and conniving so popular to the old, established opera companies, Impresario Maurice Frank will be at complete liberty to select the finest voices and talent available for the initial performance.

Many luxurious voices and warming personalities have been kept from the public eye due to the petty politics of several past and present Grand Opera companies.

Among the worthy voices so hidden was that of one of the world's greatest tenors, a Chicago artist of great merit, Mr. John Pane-Gasser. Mr. Pane-Gasser will appear in an important role in the first Saturday night performance of the Chicago Stadium Grand Opera.

A series of the world's most popular operas will be presented. The first presentation will be selected from Carmen, Aida, La Gioconda, Il Trovatore, Samson and Delilah, La Juive, Thais and many other notable and popular works.

Will County State's Attorney Fight May Be Three Cornered

(By County News Service)

An independent candidate for state's attorney of Will county will oppose the Republican and Democratic nominees at the November election, it was learned from a authoritative source the past week.

Rumors that a third candidate would enter the race have been circulated for several weeks and although the name of the candidate was not divulged, it was definitely stated that all arrangements have been made for the third candidate to commence campaigning within the next ten days or two weeks.

William R. McCabe of Lockport is the Republican nominee for state's attorney and Francis Loughran, Joliet lawyer, the Democratic candidate.

The Trial of Aaron Burr

Aaron Burr

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-five years ago the eyes of the whole nation were turned toward Richmond, Va., for there was taking place one of the most dramatic events in American history—what has been called "the greatest criminal trial in American history and one of the notable trials in the annals of the law." No less a person than Aaron Burr, but lately Vice President of the United States, was on trial for his life and the charge against him was that of committing a crime which was a threat to the safety of not just one person or a group of persons but to the safety of the whole nation, the crime of high treason.

Although Burr was acquitted by what was substantially a Scotch verdict of "not proven, my lord," and historians are still doubtful as to whether or not the famous "Burr Conspiracy" was actually a treasonable scheme, the name of Aaron Burr has come down in popular belief among our "galaxy of scoundrels" second only to Benedict Arnold. Whether or not he has been assigned such a place justly or unjustly is a matter over which again historians disagree.

In the Presidential election of 1800 Burr and Thomas Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican candidates, each received 73 electoral votes, a tie which threw the election into the house of representatives, which was strongly Federalist. After balloting for a week, ten votes were cast for Jefferson and four for Burr, and under the Constitution as it stood then this made Jefferson President and Burr, Vice President. Because of political jobbery with the Federalists, Burr lost whatever regard the leaders among the new party held for him. Then he became involved in a bitter struggle for supremacy in New York politics and because of the antagonism of Jefferson all the patronage was thrown to Burr's rivals, the Clintons and the Livingstons. Accordingly he accepted Federalist support in the gubernatorial race of 1804, an alliance which was fought bitterly by Alexander Hamilton. The result was the defeat of Burr, who held Hamilton chiefly responsible for his humiliation. Then followed the famous Burr-Hamilton duel in which Burr's pistols ended the great career of Washington's secretary of the treasury and made Burr a political and social pariah.

Discredited in the East where he had been a leader, Burr turned to the West to recoup his fortunes, hoping to capitalize on the unrest among the Westerners where talk of disunion was rife. Crossing the Alleghenies he arrived at Blennerhassett's island in the Ohio river where lived Harman Blennerhassett, a wealthy Irishman, who had settled there in 1798. To Blennerhassett Burr proposed a wild scheme of raising an armed force in the Old Southwest, driving the Spaniards out of Mexico and establishing a great southern confederacy composed of these conquered Mexican possessions and the American territory west of the Alleghenies where the sentiment for disunion seemed so strong.

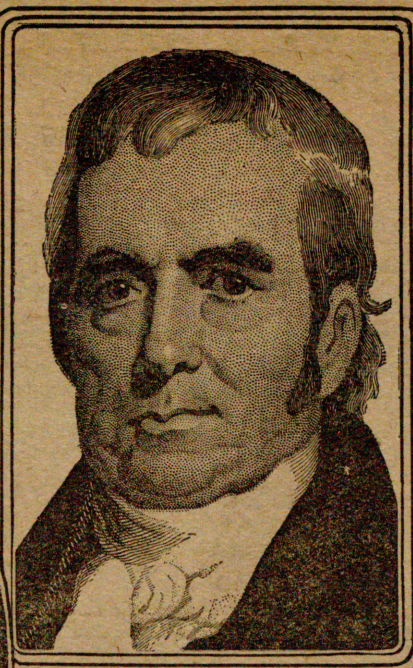

Blennerhassett was enough impressed by Burr's scheme to mortgage his vast possessions to furnish the necessary money. They also hoped to gain the aid of Great Britain in carrying out their scheme and, further to insure the success of the plan, Burr won the support of General Wilkinson, then governor of Louisiana territory, commander of the United States army and "as two-faced a villain as ever served the United States government."

Throughout 1805 and 1806 Burr developed his plot which became well known throughout the West. The federal authorities, however, seem to have been strangely blind to what was taking place until at last Wilkinson betrayed the scheme to Jefferson who on November 27, 1806, issued a Presidential proclamation calling for the arrest of all those involved. Wilkinson and the others, to save their own skins, deserted Burr and, in the modern parlance, he was made the goat of the whole affair. Attempting to flee, Burr was arrested in Alabama and brought back to Virginia for trial on the charge of treason.

His case was tried in the United States circuit court sitting at Richmond and never, perhaps, in American history has there been gathered together in a courtroom such a galaxy of notables as assembled in that little room in Richmond. John Marshall, chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States presided over the trial. Luther Martin and Edmund Randolph were counsel for the accused and William Wirt was counsel for the government. The foreman of the grand jury which brought the indictment against Burr was the waspish but brilliant John Randolph of Roanoke. And not the least of the great figures in this case was Burr's charming daughter, Theodosia, of tragic fame later.

Although Aaron Burr was upon trial on the most serious charge which can be placed against the citizen of a country, in reality he was little more than a pawn in what was at the time regarded as a test of strength between the Republican President Jefferson and the Federalist Chief Justice Marshall. The trial lasted from March 27 to September 7, 1807, and the full story of the legal maneuvers executed by the two clashing forces would require a book for the telling.

Under the Constitution, treason against the United States consists "only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," and no person may be convicted of it "unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court." The crux of the whole case against Burr was whether or not on a certain date (December 10, 1806) Burr had actually "levied war against the United States" by assembling an armed force on Blennerhassett's island and on the day following had set in motion this same armed force in an expedition against the City of New Orleans.

The prosecution produced a series of witnesses, mainly servants of Blennerhassett, to prove this point. Then it announced its intention of introducing evidence to show Burr's connection with the assemblage on the island, whereupon the defense sprang a surprise which turned the tide in Burr's favor. Developing the fact that on the night of December 10 Burr had not been present at the island, but had been 200 miles away in Kentucky, they contended that under the Constitution the assemblage on Blen-nerhassett's island could not be regarded as his act, even granting that he had advised it, for, said they, advising war is one thing but levying it is quite another. If this interpretation was correct, then no overt act of levying war, either within the jurisdiction of the court or stated in the indictment, had been or could be shown against Burr.

Next Chief Justice Marshall handed down an opinion accepting virtually the contention of Burr's attorneys and when the prosecution was unable to produce two witnesses who had actually seen Burr procure the assemblage on the island, it allowed the case to go to the jury.

Shortly thereafter the following verdict was returned: "We of the jury say that Aaron Burr is not proved to be guilty under this indictment by any evidence submitted to us. We therefore find him not guilty." At the order of the chief justice this Scotch verdict was entered on the records of the court as a simple "not guilty."

Acquitted, Burr became an exile and an outcast. The man who came within one vote of being President of the United States wandered about Europe for four years, borrowing small amounts, attempting dubious promotions, urging the French to seize Louisiana in 1810, and finally returning to his own land with a false wig and whiskers. Shortly after his arrival he encountered the breaking of the one tie that held him to the earth when his beloved Theodosia, who had stood by him when the whole world seemed to have turned against him took ship from the South to meet him in New York. The ship on which she sailed never reached port and what her fate was is to this day an unsolved mystery. One of the most tragic pictures in all American history is that of the broken, disgraced Aaron Burr, a devoted father whatever else he may have been, going down to the battery every day for years, searching the horizon for the sail of a ship which never came—the ship bringing back to him his long-lost daughter. And then as a final touch to an ill-fated career was his unfortunate marriage to the famous Madame Jumel who divorced him on the day he died.

Lesson for September 18

THE REPORTS OF THE SPIES

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life: of whom shall I be afraid?

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 13:17-14:45.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Brave Spies.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Scouting Through the Promised Land.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Brave and the Cowardly Scouts.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Faith Gives Courage.

I. The Spies Sent Out (13:17-20).
Less than two years have passed since the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage. They are now at Kadesh-barnea within sight of the Promised Land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21). But they failed to do so because of unbelief (Heb. 3:19). The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies, but that the people, because of lack of faith, made the request. There was a threefold purpose in sending out the spies:

1. To see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 18).
2. To see whether the people who dwelt there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18).
3. And to see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or of tents (v. 19).

II. The Commission Executed (13:21-23).
They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limits. On their return they gathered some specimens of fruit.

III. The Spies Rendered Reports (13:26-33).
On their return this committee of explorers rendered both a majority and minority report to the entire congregation (v. 26).

1. The majority report (vv. 26-29).
a. "The land floweth with milk and honey" (v. 27).

- b. The people who live there are strong (v. 28).
- c. The people live in walled cities (v. 28).

- d. The land is inhabited by giants (v. 28 cf. v. 33). In comparison with the inhabitants they saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed that it seemed impossible to conquer them.

2. The minority report (vv. 30-33). This report in part agreed with the first. It did not ignore the difficulties nor dispute the facts, but it did deny the conclusion of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to get possession of the land, and therefore urged immediate action.

IV. The Rebellion of the People. (14:1-44).

1. This rebellion began by crying (vv. 1-3). They even wished that they had died in the wilderness or in Egypt. God took them at their word. He sent them back to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years, during which time all of that generation died except Caleb and Joshua.

2. Proposition to return to Egypt (vv. 4-10). They proposed to select a captain as their leader. Joshua and Caleb protested against this, which so exasperated the people that they were about to stone them when God manifested his glory before all Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb.

3. God's wrath upon the people (vv. 11, 12). Because of their unbelief God purposed to smite them with pestilence, disinherit them, and supplant them with a nation mightier than they.

4. Moses' intercession in behalf of the people (vv. 13-19). Moses plead with God against this judgment because the Egyptians would hear of it and blaspheme and this they would pass on to the other nations, saying that God was not able to bring them into the land.

5. The Lord's response to Moses' plea (vv. 20-30). He assured Moses that he had granted pardon according to his intercession but told him that although he would bring them into the land according to his promise, yet with the exception of Joshua and Caleb the men of that generation should be debarred.

6. The presumption of the people (vv. 40-44). Having in unbelief refused to go up at the command of Moses, they now in presumption go.

V. The People Smitten by the Amalekites and Canaanites (v. 45).

Because the people refused to heed Moses and presumptuously attempted to go up, God permitted the Amalekites and Canaanites to come down upon them to their destruction.

Baking Companies Unify Operations

New York.—The National Biscuit Company and the Iten Biscuit Company, will unite their operations throughout the Central West, a joint announcement states. The two companies have been affiliated since 1928, but have continued to operate separately, each maintaining its own complete line of crackers and cookies.

The move will take effect shortly, and Otto H. Barmettler, of Omaha, Neb., President of the Iten Biscuit Company, has been elected Vice-President of the National Biscuit Company to have jurisdiction throughout the territory, with headquarters at Omaha. Mr. Barmettler has been a prominent figure in the baking industry for thirty years, having had previous associations with the American Biscuit Company, the Continental Biscuit Company, and also with the National Biscuit Company.

The Iten Bakeries at Clinton, Ia., Omaha, Oklahoma City and Memphis, and the National Biscuit Company bakeries at Des Moines, Kansas City, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Mo., will continue to be operated on the same scale as heretofore. Iten products will be made and distributed by National Biscuit Company under its name and trade-mark. So far as possible, sales and delivery territories will be rearranged to provide work for the employees of both companies.

This move will co-ordinate the business interest of the National Biscuit Company in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Tennessee, and parts of Wyoming, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Colorado, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Kentucky. The National Biscuit Company was organized in 1898, and is the largest baking company in the world, employing about 25,000 people, and operating fifty bakeries and 260 branch offices. It makes approximately 500 varieties of crackers and cookies.

Leading the Leader Back

Grover V'halen, former official "Greeter" of New York, was talking to a New York reporter about Russia.

"Russia thinks she is going to lead the world," he said. "Well, Russia in the end will fare like the man in the anecdote."

"My wife," the man said, "told me to lead the old cat off somewhere and lose it. So I put the cat in a basket and tramped out into the country about eight miles."

"Well," said another man, "did you lose the cat?"

"Lose it?" said the first man. "If I hadn't followed it I'd never have found my way back home."

Saving Billions

A saving of ten cents a day in the food bills of all the city dwellers in America is predicted by statistical experts of the Country Home as a result of certain agricultural economies now being begun. The saving will amount to a national total of $2,500,000,000 every year without reducing anybody's diet by so much as a radish.

Death Valley's Isolation Yields to Advance of Civilization at Last

Fast Fish Soufflé

MUCH fish is served for Lenten fasting, but that's not the kind of a fish we mean. The kind we have in mind is the kind that can be cooked into a soufflé faster and with less trouble than any other kind. Peculiar kind of fish? Not at all. In fact it's many kinds, and its only peculiarity is that it wears a tin overcoat. It's canned.

When you buy a fresh fish to make a soufflé, you first go to the store, if you're wise, to pick it out. Then you take it home. Then you wash it while waiting for the water to heat. Then you cook it. Then you wait for it to cool. Then you remove the skin and bones. Then you flake it. Eight separate steps.

When you use canned fish for this purpose, you first phone the grocery store for your favorite brand, or take a can of salmon or tuna down from your shelf, open the can, and flake the fish right into the white sauce. Three steps.

Here's the Recipe

To make a tuna fish soufflé add two cups of the fish (the contents of a one-pound can) to two cups of thick white sauce, then add one tablespoon lemon juice and the beaten yolks of six eggs. Fold in six stiffly beaten egg whites, and pour into a buttered baking dish. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven—325°—for from forty to forty-five minutes, or till set. Serve at once. This recipe serves eight.*

Triangle Talkies

Our regular business meeting was held last Monday night and one of the important factors of the meeting was the scratching off of several names on our enrollment because they had been absent for three consecutive business meetings. We didn't like to do this but rules are rules. Sorry folks!

Stan left for Champaign this past week. We didn't like to have him leave us again; but we wish him some kean grades, and plenty good times.

Al Kreuger is back with us again. still has his hand in a cast; however he looks fine, and we are mighty glad that he's with us again.

We missed "Meyer" at meeting—why he never misses! Maybe his new girl friend is occupying all of his time now?

I suppose most of our members will be at the opening dance at New Lenox Saturday night. At least they were frequent goers last season.

Don't forget social night next Monday night. Wonder what new surprise this committee has in store for us?

Be hearin' from us again next week.

This year the local school book dealers find a big demand for second hand books as families cannot afford to buy new books. These 2nd hand books are in good condition and have been bought from a book concern in Chicago who make a specialty of buying second hand books from all over the country. Some of the second hand books which are being used in the Tinley Park school this year, were used in schools in Minnesota and Wisconsin a few years ago.
